L.P. Hartley's 'The Go-Between' takes place in the long hot Summer of 1900, and tells of how young Leo, staying with Marcus, a school friend, at the aristocratic Brandham Hall, begins to act as a messenger between Ted, the farmer, and Marian, Marcus's beautiful young sister. Leo narrates the events in 1952, as a mature adult looking back.

The Go-Between Summary. Next. Prologue. When sixty-something Leo Colston rummages through his old school belongings, he finds his younger self's diary from fifty years earlier—when a twelve-year-old Leo spent a fateful summer at the Brandham Hall estate in Norfolk. Feeling the advance of his age, Leo decides that now is the time to confront the memory of those events that he has repressed for so many years—events that have ruined any chance he once had at an “emotional” life.

The Go-Between by L. P. Hartley Plot Summary | LitCharts

As an exploration of the social class and hierarchy in relation to love and sex, The Go-Between has elements in common with the works of D.H. Lawrence (such as Lady Chatterley's Lover) and Thomas Hardy. Hartley's book resembles a bildungsroman—a novel that specifically chronicles someone's journey from youth to adulthood—but shows the way that trauma can interrupt growing up.
