Scotlands Black Death The Foul

Within months, however, Scots themselves began to fall victim to what they had described as "the foul death of the English." No aspect of life went untouched by this virulent disease. Beyond the physical devastation caused, Karen Jillings also describes the social impact of the plague—cynicism towards the Church and the abandonment of serfdom—that was integral to the development of the country.

There is a quite dreadful footnote to this tale of the Black Death. In 1900, Glasgow became the last city in Britain to be visited by bubonic plague. There were 36 confirmed cases and 16 people died, most of them in and around the Gorbals, swathes of which were already slums in which plague-carrying rats thrived.
